17. Automated Decisioning and Data Subject Rights

Our advisory services are delivered by Josh St. Laurent personally. While AI systems support our operations as described in Section 5, no decision affecting your account, your investments, your fees, or your advisory relationship is rendered by an AI system without human review and approval. AI systems extract structured information, draft communications, summarize meetings, and surface tasks for advisor attention; advisor judgment determines how to act on those outputs in your interest.

You have the following rights with respect to AI-assisted processing of your data:

- Right to know how AI is used: Section 5 of this policy describes the categories of AI usage in our practice. You may request additional detail by contacting us.
- Right to opt out: You may exercise the AI opt-out described in Section 14 at any time.
- Right to human review: Any output that an AI system produces about your account is reviewed by Josh St. Laurent before it informs advisory recommendations or is delivered to you. You may request additional information about the human review process for any specific deliverable.
- Right to challenge AI outputs: If you believe an AI-generated output (for example, a meeting summary, a financial plan draft, or a communication) inaccurately reflects your situation or our discussion, you may request correction; we will review and respond.
